Bronx Baby and Floral Boat Win Asbury Park Beauty Title

Residents of Borough Eager to Welcome Furmans Home From Summer Resort.

Rosalind Furman, two years old, is awaited on the streets of the Bronx, on her return from Asbury Park, where she is spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Furman, at the Hotel St. Laurent, Rosalind won the first prize of the Sixth Division in the Baby Parade at Asbury Park last Wednesday because she was the beautifullest baby in the beautifullest float. The float was a boat made of carnations and trimmed in gold, in which sat Miss Rosalind, in gold hair, blue eyes and a pink and gold frock. Her city home is at No. 1728 Crotona Park, East, the Bronx. Her parents admit to the Evening World that the com-mittee was right in making the award and add that they don't say it because she is their own baby either-which goes to show that Rosalind has the right sort Rich Man's Son Accused of Sharing in Forged Check Swindle.

Although he is the son of a wealthy man and was the protege of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, Irving M. Mitchell, twenty-one, who has been living in an apartment at No. 14 West 101st Street, seems to have been unable to keep out of serious trouble. On Aug. 12 he was released from the navy prison at Portsmouth, N. H., and to-day he is in the hands of the New York police charged with grand larceny. It is alleged he passed a forged check for $700 on the Hotel

According to the police, the boy came under the influence of a notorous crook while serving his sentence. The second prisoner, who had charge of the printing and engraving plant, devised a plan for the defrauding of persons throughout the country by means of passing forged certified checks printed secretly in the prison plant. To further his scheme he cultivated the acquaintance of young men from wealthy families about to be released. Besides the checks this prisoner is said to have furnished his accomplices with engraved cards representing the bearers as officials in big banks and corporations.

came to New York where, it is charged, he bought a safeguarding device for printing the amount to be drawn on the face of the check. He went to the Hotel Belmont and, it is alleged, presented to Joseph Hook, the cashier, a check for $700 drawn on the First National Bank of Portsmouth, N. H., and signed "M. Junkins, Cashier." Hook has known Mitchell for many years, and when the young man told him the check represented his savings in the navy he had no hesitation about cashing it. A few days later, it is charged, the check came back marked

Mitchell was arrested last night by Detective William J. Jones of the East 51st Street station, who said be found five other checks on the prisner and the check printing device in is rooms at the 101st Street address. The six checks totailed $2,725. Mitchell also had a big navy revolver.

Naval officers working on the case said the prisoner who furnished the checks, and who has been indicted in Newark, N. J., for other forgeries, was the man who actually signed the
